

Hook (0-5) :

Top 5 best startup movies that'll blow your mind and inspire you!

[Core Story: 6-45 seconds]

1. The Social Network (2010)

First, The Social Network. Mark Zuckerberg, a Harvard student, created Facebook in his dorm room... but it's not just a tech story—it's about power, betrayal, and the fight for control. In just a few months, he went from zero to creating a billion-dollar empire. Remember the line? 'You don't get to 500 million friends without making a few enemies.'

2. Jobs (2013)

Next, Jobs. Steve Jobs' journey wasn't easy. A college dropout turned visionary. He revolutionized tech, from the first Macintosh to the game-changing iPhone. Did you know? Jobs was fired from his own company, only to return and transform Apple into the world's most valuable company! It's about vision, resilience, and never giving up.

3. The Founder (2016)

And then, The Founder. Ray Kroc, a struggling salesman, discovers a small burger joint and turns it into McDonald's, a global empire. This movie isn't just about business, it's about seizing opportunity and learning to scale. Kroc once said, 'I saw the future in those two brothers, and I took it.' It's a story of ambition, strategy, and... sometimes ruthless decisions.

These films show the true grit of entrepreneurship—failure, success, and everything in between. If you're ready to take on the world, these stories will teach you exactly how to dream big and make it happen. Which movie do you think will inspire your next big idea?

Follow for more startup-related videos